About This Production

Yasmina Reza's dark comedy of manners holds a mirror up to our own behaviour and forces us to question the extent to which we, as a species, have evolved.

Two boys have had a playground fight, during which one sustains minor injuries. The boys' parents meet to resolve the matter. What begins as a courteous meeting disintegrates badly once the gloves come off and sparks begin to fly.

This is a fascinating comedy of manners, with ever-changing shifts of power as the layers of polite behaviour are shed. Or, as Variety put it, "Elegant, acerbic and entertainingly fuelled on pure bile".
